

THE WEEKLY NEWS

PUBLISHED BY THE
NEWS COMPANY,
J. F. O'CONNOR, Editor.
H. P. LINDEN, Business Manager.
Subscription Rates: $1.00 per month in advance, $1.50 per year in advance. Single copies, 5 cents. Entered as second-class matter, October 1, 1909.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1909.

A CONSOLIDATION.

THE NEWS COMPANY has purchased the Emporia Weekly Democrat, its material, subscription list, good will and all. As was known to many, the Democrat has had a hard struggle for some time to maintain itself. Several things conspired to cripple its influence, and drag it down. Its late management essayed the task of putting it on a paying basis if possible. For several months it buffeted the waves, but to no purpose. The undertaking was too much. A proposition to sell to the News Company was made, and entertained. The result of the negotiations was that a consolidation of the two papers will take place. The consolidated paper will be known as the News-Democrat, and will be the best paper in the county, and one of the best in the state. After this week the subscribers to the Democrat will receive the News-Democrat instead, and will, we think, find nothing to complain of in the change. We shall endeavor to make the consolidated paper satisfactory to each and all of them.

THE NEWS COMPANY will be henceforth supplied with a job department, and will be in readiness to do as excellent work in this line as any office in the city. We will have the presses, the material and the workmen, none of which will we allow to be excelled in the state.

THANKS to that rebel geographer, Cy Leland got there at last.

LAWRENCE BARNETT has undergone a surgical operation for the removal of the glandular affection in his neck.

THESE are great days for Chicago's cranks and madmen. They are already there flocking to the Cronin convicts.

IF THE farmers did not need money badly, one might smile at their grumbling because cars can't be had to haul their stock to market.

THANKFUL for small favors is all we can allow the Cronin jury. It might have been, and the wonder is, it was not worse.

STEEL rails are made as cheaply in this country as in England says Mr. Carnegie. Then of what use is a tariff of $15 a ton on them?

INGALLS' tongue is all right. He calls Senator Hiscok a "vascular chump," whatever that is. Voorhees and Hiscok are great friends now.

THE Salina Republican is being edited by Tom, Dick and Harry of the Kansas press. It is a lawbreaker, and its leading editorial killed a time at the end of a protracted lissan with an adventures.

CONGRESSMEN are very raw over their losses through Silcott's defalcation. It was too bad, to be sure, but it is not a matter of any concern whatever to the people.

His friends are assuring us that Mr. Blaine will be a candidate for president in 1912. A very significant pointer that as to their opinions of Benjamin as a statesman.

THE Czar took much the other day and instantly every nose in Europe felt ticklish, and all began to sneeze. If Benjamin Harrison should do his nose with snuff, how many in Kansas would sneeze?

THE name of Vice President Morton's blind tiger has been changed from the "Shoreham Buffet" to the "Shoreham Grill." No change however, in the price. You pay 20 cents a glass for snake medicine all the same.

His friends say that Colonel Blaine is anxious to meet Grover at the polls in 1912. Well, we know of nothing that would more delight Grover and his friends, except perhaps the chance of getting another whack at Ben.

PEOPLE are very much alike all the world over. In Kansas we have an occasional fracas over county seats. In Africa the English and Portuguese are quarreling over a strip of territory scarcely big enough for fighting ground.

YESTERDAY was a bad day for the Cronin commission. The Indians were pig-headed and stubborn. Tomorrow's report is apt to be more favorable. The condition of things at Talehauk reminds one of the signal service.

ANOTHER English paper has been convicted of libel for intimating that a certain noble lord knew something about the West End scandal in London. It is still perilous business for a newspaper to alude to the peccadilloes of Piccadilly.

"How to meet indebtedness" is a question that is perplexing some people. How not to get into debt, is a matter more easily understood by many more, especially those who conceive sudden desires to benefit by the reputed salubrity of the Canadian climate.

THE drift of the young man of the country to-day toward the republican party is very evident. Democracy is nearly a reminiscence.—Kansas City Gazette.

Indeed! We suppose you concluded to march to the election. What a delightful thing it is to be an optunist in the midst of the most discouraging circumstances.

JUDON MCCONNELL, we have no doubt, will regard the news in the Cronin case with a certain degree of composure, and may be thank Heaven that it is no worse. He is a weak brother on the bench, whose backbone is a string of Bologna sausage, and who lived in Congress during the day that some one would put out his light.

THE Kansas delegation in congress are said to be pressing the claims of Judge Horton of the supreme court for Judge Brewer's place. That settles Horton. When the president learns what the party in a given locality wants, he does the other thing.

"A SURVIVOR and common place Hooper" is what the New York Sun calls its president. Respect for the feelings of Baby McKee should have made the Sun more respectful, and yet Senator Farwell will not, away down in the bottom of his heart, agree with us.

A MISSISSIPPI jury found Kilrain guilty, not of fighting a duel, which is all right—but of assault and battery, which is not all right, since it is nowhere recorded that Kilrain either assaulted or battered Sullivan to an extent worth mentioning. John L. is the only guilty party in that affair.

THE story printed the other day to the effect that President Maxwell would, after January 1, grant no more passes to employees, and would curtail those given to the press, was a fake, which he very promptly de-nounced. He knows the importance of standing in with the newspapers.

CLEVELAND's late Boston speech has made quite a stir among the opposition papers. They don't like it, but because they don't, abuse the maker of it roundly. This is the best possible evidence of Grover's strength and power in the land. An enemy does not wish his ammunition on a worthless foe.

WHEN rogues fall out, we are pretty sure to hear something in the shape of a dull thud. The republicans in North Dakota are quarreling in a way that promises to expose some of the bribery schemes that were worked there during the last term of congress. Offices in that blizzard and drouth stricken commonwealth.

THE dictum that a national debt is a national blessing never found many adherents in this country. The crumpled feature of the national banking system is a good thing, but the people would hardly favor the lengthening out of the debt indefinitely, even at low interest charges, to preserve this feature.—Globe-Democrat.

"MEN spend a great deal of money foolishly—we all do. Men look back on the old whiskey days with wonder, and say, 'Come, come, Brother Martin, speak for yourself only. We do not all spend money foolishly for whiskey. You politicians have lots of gain in using the phrase "No reform" in connection with your principal weakness."

A DISCUSSION of the race problem in the south is fore-shadowed in the senate shortly between Butler of South Carolina and Senator Ingalls. If the hide peeler gains any glory from a tilt with Butler, who is himself a most potent factor in the race problem, he will have to get up very much earlier than on the day in which he warmed Voorhees' hide.

SENATOR INGALLS, the most bitter of partisans, said of Chief Justice Fuller's oration the other day: "It was a thoughtful, eloquent and patriotic oration, to those elevated and inspiring sentiment I listened with pleasure, advantage and interest for the first time." No orator since the days of Cicero who can compel from him an admission of the fact, may justly boast of the feat.

A MICHIGAN judge has just ruled that it is not libelous for a newspaper to brand a candidate for congress as "an ignorant and a fool." This decision will be hailed with delight by the Kansas press. It is a lawbreaker, and its leading editorial killed a time at the end of a protracted lissan with an adventures.

CONGRESSMEN are very raw over their losses through Silcott's defalcation. It was too bad, to be sure, but it is not a matter of any concern whatever to the people.

His friends are assuring us that Mr. Blaine will be a candidate for president in 1912. A very significant pointer that as to their opinions of Benjamin as a statesman.

THE Czar took much the other day and instantly every nose in Europe felt ticklish, and all began to sneeze. If Benjamin Harrison should do his nose with snuff, how many in Kansas would sneeze?

THE name of Vice President Morton's blind tiger has been changed from the "Shoreham Buffet" to the "Shoreham Grill." No change however, in the price. You pay 20 cents a glass for snake medicine all the same.

His friends say that Colonel Blaine is anxious to meet Grover at the polls in 1912. Well, we know of nothing that would more delight Grover and his friends, except perhaps the chance of getting another whack at Ben.

PEOPLE are very much alike all the world over. In Kansas we have an occasional fracas over county seats. In Africa the English and Portuguese are quarreling over a strip of territory scarcely big enough for fighting ground.

YESTERDAY was a bad day for the Cronin commission. The Indians were pig-headed and stubborn. Tomorrow's report is apt to be more favorable. The condition of things at Talehauk reminds one of the signal service.

ANOTHER English paper has been convicted of libel for intimating that a certain noble lord knew something about the West End scandal in London. It is still perilous business for a newspaper to alude to the peccadilloes of Piccadilly.

"How to meet indebtedness" is a question that is perplexing some people. How not to get into debt, is a matter more easily understood by many more, especially those who conceive sudden desires to benefit by the reputed salubrity of the Canadian climate.

THE drift of the young man of the country to-day toward the republican party is very evident. Democracy is nearly a reminiscence.—Kansas City Gazette.

Indeed! We suppose you concluded to march to the election. What a delightful thing it is to be an optunist in the midst of the most discouraging circumstances.

JUDON MCCONNELL, we have no doubt, will regard the news in the Cronin case with a certain degree of composure, and may be thank Heaven that it is no worse. He is a weak brother on the bench, whose backbone is a string of Bologna sausage, and who lived in Congress during the day that some one would put out his light.

It is not probable that Judge Brewer's success will be appreciated in the states of Minnesota, Iowa, Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri. Taking Brewer for the supreme bench, and taking his successor from the ranks of the croninists, we know more about the case than the eleven others, was for acquittal of the prisoners from the outset. The reading public will have no difficulty in following the motives that controlled this particular juror. It is quite plain that Alexander Sullivan, the man on whom the authorities have their eyes fixed, was not idle. He could not afford to have any of the prisoners sentenced to the penitentiary. Before submitting to such a fate, some of them would save his face by exposing the true inwardness of the great crime, and giving up the names of all connected with it. Such a contingency, though it would not be a face, and therefore prevented. That is the short and long of it. The verdict is a failure, unless it results in something that will bring to justice the instigator of the conspiracy that was carried out at Emporia, which is the case, and possibly Beggs.

SENATOR INGALLS has introduced a bill in the senate dividing Kansas into two federal judicial districts by a line running east and west through the middle of the state. In the eastern district, court is to be held at Leavenworth, Topeka and Hays City, and in the southern, at Fort Scott, Wichita and Larned. It will be no doubt that although an excellent bill, the senator provided in his bill for holding court in the eastern division of the northern district at Leavenworth instead of his own town. In the southern district, instead of holding court at Emporia, which is the case, and possibly Beggs.

THE dead lock in the Montana legislature was broken yesterday when the democratic senators, according to an understanding reached with the republicans, reached among the leaders of both parties, took their seats in the senate chamber. Negotiations had been in progress several days looking to some sort of a settlement of the difficulty in the senate. It was understood that when the democratic senators took their seats, the republican representatives should also go into the house and that both bodies should appoint committees of equal political strength to investigate fully and report upon the voting in the tunnel project. In the meantime political questions should be avoided in both houses, and necessary legislation proceeded with. Such was the programme which yesterday's action indicates will be carried out.

A NEW YORK man called Fullerton, who painted, conceived the idea of painting, conceals the house of his day of boxing the public. He got some crude colors and in twenty minutes he had painted a daub called "The Sunset." It was exposed to the public, and a number of people, and would not let the artist, then put on it the name of the celebrated landscape painter, George Inness, and placed it among other paintings at a well advertised art auction. The public, it is said, did not notice the high price of the picture, but about it and filled the air with exclamations of admiration. When it was put up, the first bid was fifty dollars; then came sixty, seventy-five, one hundred and did not stop until the daub was knocked down for one hundred and seventy-five dollars. When the joke got out, all New York laughed at the high art critics. High art in painting and music has a great many devotees of the kind who saw such wonders in this Fullerton job.

THE public school committee of Boston has added Volapuk to the list of studies to be taught in the free night schools, and it is expected that before long it will be introduced into the day schools. This is the first time that the name of Volapuk has been taken on the matter in this country, but it is likely that the movement will spread. The advantages of Volapuk are obvious. It is not intended to supersede the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it. It can be learned in eight or ten lessons by any intelligent boy or girl of sixteen, sufficiently to conduct correspondence, which is the chief benefit of it. It is a new and easy language, and so the story runs, and it appears that in spite of all that our legislature and our congressmen have done for us, our farming communities are more discontented and discouraged, and that the language literature of any nation but to supplement it